The construction of the New Parliament building in Mount Hampden is showing signs of good work acumen.

The works began in November 2018, just after the ground breaking ceremony held by the President of the Republic of Zimbabwe, His Excellency Emmerson Dambudzo Mnangagwa.

Speaking at a tour of the construction site, the Speaker of Parliament, Advocate Jacob Mudenda hailed the contractors for the progress made.

He indicated that he was impressed by the work being done at the construction site. “I am extremely impressed by the level of work that is being undertaken so far’.

The Minister of Local Government, Public Works and National Housing, Honourable July Moyo, also explained that the Parliament paves way for the Meanwhile enabling works have been completed which include power supply and access road. Some of the completed facilities include site offices, storage workshop shades, contractors’ laboratory, erection of cranes and staff accommodation.

On the main building, the foundations of the outer office block have now been completed.

The steel fixing and concreting to ground floor and first floor slab are in progress. Foundation for the inner chambers is also in progress. Work has been progressing well as per programme of works and the shell of the building is expected to be completed by the end of this year.

At the peak of the site activities, approximately 800 workers are expected to be employed with locals constituting two thirds of the workforce.
